	Costs of a $10,000 investment	Costs paid as a percentage of a $10,000 investment
Class A	$82	0.73%

Gross expense ratio as of the latest prospectus: 1.00%. See prospectus for any contractual or voluntary waivers; without a waiver, costs would have been higher.

How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

Class A shares of the Fund returned 23.70% (unadjusted for sales charges) for the period ended August 31, 2026. The Fund's index, the S&P 500® Index, returned 20.38% for the same period.

We held a positive view on the broader U.S. equity market throughout the period, based on expectations for continued strength in the economy and robust corporate profit growth driven in part by strong investment spending on AI datacenters. However, we generally kept overall portfolio risk neutral versus the index to focus on sector and industry preferences. This active approach proved effective and was the key factor in the Fund’s outperformance.

Positioning in information technology made the largest contribution. We maintained an equal weighting in the sector as a whole, but we held preferences at the industry level in an effort to navigate a complex environment of robust earnings growth and demanding valuations. Positioning in the semiconductor industry drove the Fund’s outperformance in technology, highlighted by holdings in Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. (1.2%), Micron Technology, Inc. (1.9%), and Lam Research Corp. (0.8%). An overweight in hardware and a corresponding underweight in software — which was pressured by concerns about disruptions from AI — was a further plus.

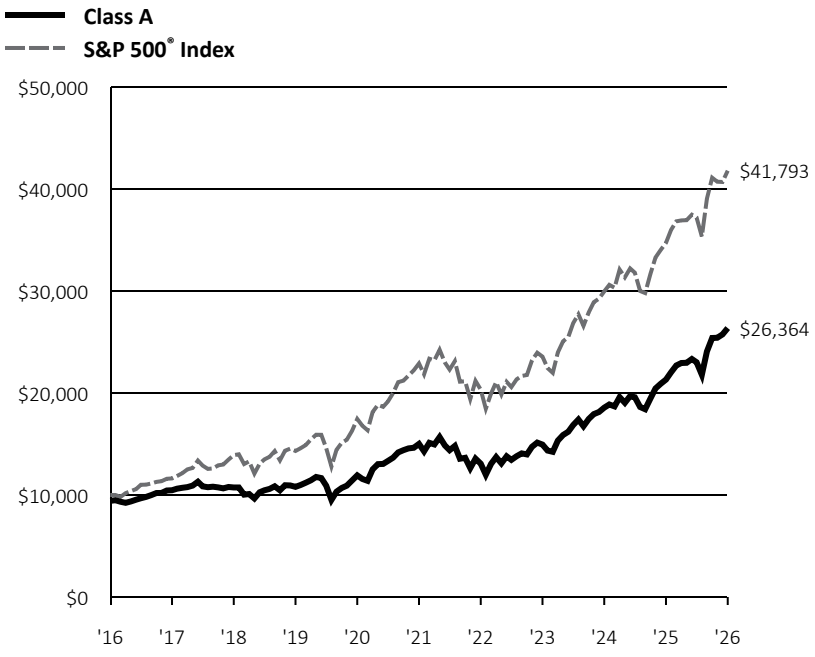
Certain sector pairings contributed, as well. An overweight in financials versus an underweight in consumer discretionary helped results, as did an overweight in healthcare against an underweight in consumer staples. On the other hand, an underweight in energy versus overweights in the chemicals and transportation industries detracted. Energy delivered the largest gain of any sector behind the rally in oil prices that accompanied the conflict in Iran.

A number of industry preferences also contributed to the Fund’s outperformance. An overweight in the interactive media industry over telecom companies in the communication services sector aided results. In addition, the Fund benefited from the outperformance of the aerospace & defense and electrical equipment industries relative to transports and other segments of the industrials sector. However, an underweight in machinery versus more cyclical areas of the sector detracted.

Percentages in parentheses are based on the Fund’s net assets as of August 31, 2026.

Fund Performance

Cumulative Growth of an Assumed $10,000 Investment
(Adjusted for Maximum Sales Charge)



Yearly periods ended August 31

The Fund's growth of an assumed $10,000 investment is adjusted for the maximum sales charge of 5.75%. This results in a net initial investment of $9,425.

S&P 500® Index is a capitalization weighted index of 500 stocks. The index is designed to measure performance of the broad domestic economy through changes in the aggregate market value of 500 stocks representing all major industries.

On each of August 9, 2021 and July 29, 2019, the Fund's investment strategy changed. Performance would have been different if the Fund's current investment strategy had been in effect during the prior periods.

Performance shown is historical. The Fund's past performance is not a good predictor or guarantee of the Fund's future performance. Investment return and principal fluctuate, so your shares may be worth more or less when redeemed. Current performance may be lower or higher than the performance data quoted. The performance graph and returns table do not reflect the deduction of taxes that a shareholder would pay on Fund distributions or the redemption of Fund shares. Please visit dws.com/en-us/products/mutual-funds for the Fund's most recent month-end performance. Fund performance includes reinvestment of all distributions. Unadjusted returns do not reflect sales charges and would have been lower if they had reflected sales charges.
